

How My Energy helps UK families lower their energy bills in less than 10 minutes

SOUTHAMPTON, HAMPSHIRE, UNITED KINGDOM, August 3, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- We have learnt this week that Centrica-owned organization will be putting electricity prices up by 12.5% one month from now, following in the strides of the other major energy companies.

In spite of the fact that gas costs will stay unaltered, for the 3 million households on a dual fuel contract, this will be a huge set back to the living standards of many UK families by an average of £76.

Helping UK families lower their energy bills

As indicated by a representative from the Department of Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy, this week's price hike announcement is bound to be followed by many more similar decisions.

Energy firms should treat all their customers fairly, and we're concerned this price rise will hit many people, already on poor-value tariffs.”
