Medicated Personal Care Products is a large and diverse industry, and incorporates a wide array of products. Medicated Personal care products also include Medicated cosmetics, and products meant for feminine hygiene. There's a slight difference between personal hygienic products and cosmetics, as cosmetics are specially meant to be used for beautification. Furthermore, different countries have different regulations governing the classification and trading of personal care products. For instance, in Canada a sunscreen that makes a therapeutic claim or contains an ingredient not meant to be used in cosmetics might be classified as a drug. Consequently, such a product may be refused to be supplied to the country, as a cosmetic.
