We practice yoga in a community-oriented environment that helps students and teachers develop strong relationships." Winkie Bresler practice yoga. In that time, The Yoga Garden has provided a supportive environment for students of all ages and abilities as well as teachers specializing in various techniques.

"The Yoga Garden is a sanctuary to nourish the mind, body and soul," says Winkie Bresler, owner of The Yoga Garden. "It boasts a private atmosphere curated to feel more like a home than a corporate studio. Smaller class sizes in an intimate yet open space means opportunities for teachers to get to know their students and provide personalized instruction."

These small classes and personalized attention ensure each student gets optimal support and guidance, and provide an excellent experience for everyone. "We practice yoga in a community-oriented environment that helps students and teachers develop strong relationships," says Bresler. "Excellent customer service is guaranteed at The Yoga Garden, and has resulted in closeness at the studio."

Bresler credits the studio's three Spectrum Awards to the individual support provided to the students, who appreciate the healing ambiance of the space and in turn have demonstrated loyalty to the studio. "Many of our students love the studio and offer their time and support: one regularly brings flowers from her personal garden to help brighten the space, and several volunteer their time to contribute to the space, often citing how good it feels simply to be there," she says. "Our students love to share what is going on in their lives, and we are thrilled to help celebrate each and every one of our students."

"The Yoga Garden is an environment of learning, strengthening, calmness and reward," says Rich H., a student at The Yoga Garden. "It's community, tranquility, enlivenment and introspection. Its teachers, students and space enhance one's health and well-being."

"Inviting, nurturing and peaceful definitely the best yoga studio in Marin and beyond," says student Mai B. "With its highly professional instructors, The Yoga Garden classes are a rewarding experience in a delightful environment and welcome all experience levels."
