Exclusive Summery About Report:

Ureteral obstruction or urinary tract obstruction is a condition of blockage of urine through the urinary tract, which may be complete or partial. In Ureteral obstruction the urine may refluxes backward into your kidneys. Ureteral obstruction is curable, but if not treated, can lead to loss of kidney function, sepsis and eventually death. Other severe consequences are kidney stones, and infection of the urinary tract. Mild symptoms generally in partial blockage are pain in a side, abnormal urine flow and urinating at night, acute stinging pain etc. Ureteral obstruction is caused by injuries such as a pelvic fracture, ureter, kidneys, bladder or colon cancers, kidney stones in ureter etc.

The market for ureteral obstruction is highly fragmented due to large number of players especially in the devices segment which has put pressure on the profit margin, rise of low quality and low cost products especially catheters which reduces the market of high quality products. Also the market for ureteral obstruction is highly dependent on product development strategy such as miniaturization of ureter stents, development of coated ureter stents. The drug segment is growing at a slow pace due to saturation of the market. Considering all these factors, the market for ureteral obstruction is expected to grow at a CAGR of ~ 8.5 % during 2017-2023.
