New webinar series from IT Governance to help businesses achieve GDPR compliance

The leading provider of GDPR training and consultancy launches webinar series to help organisations prepare for the EU GDPR.

ELY, UNITED KINGDOM, August 21, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- IT Governance, the leading provider of General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) training and consultancy, is launching a webinar series to help organisations prepare for the EU GDPR.

The GDPR comes into effect in May 2018 and requires any organisation that processes the personal data of EU residents to develop clear policies and procedures, and to adopt appropriate technical and organisational measures to minimise risk.

The new regulation introduces key changes that focus on organisations and their data subjects, necessitating reviews of procedures to ensure compliance. These reviews will need to examine, for example, how you obtain consent, conduct security risk assessments and control data transfers.

In this webinar series, our data protection and information security experts will share practical insights about implementing a data-centric security approach in line with the Regulation. Designed to inform senior management and boards about the potential impact of the GDPR, this series will help to improve information security, mitigate risks and reduce GDPR compliance budgets.

Join IT Governance's founder and executive chairman, Alan Calder, to learn about the key steps your organisation should take to manage and achieve compliance with the GDPR.

The free webinar series includes:

• The GDPR and its requirements for implementing data protection impact assessments (DPIAs) >>
• Conducting a data flow mapping exercise under the GDPR >>
• The GDPR: demonstrating data protection by design and by default >>
• The first steps towards GPDR compliance >>

Viewers can submit questions throughout the webinar for the follow on Q&A session.
