Author Shares How Joseph Met the President at the AJC Decatur Book Festival 2017

ATLANTA, GA, UNITED STATES, August 21, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- From 1 to 3 September 2017, Leola Wilkerson-Williams, author of the piece How Joseph Met The President will be joining this year's AJC Decatur Book Festival, a community-based, non-profit event and largest independent festival in the country. Being renowned as one of the five largest festivals in the country, DBF continues to gather world-class authors as well as hundreds of thousands of festival-goers to enjoy book signings, author readings, panel discussions, an interactive children's area, live music, parade, cooking demonstrations, poetry slams, writing workshops, and others. These activities will be happening in and around the historic downtown Decatur square.

"We always knew Atlanta had a thriving writing and book community, but it needed a centerpiece to bring all the parts together," Tom Bell points out as he recalls the history of DBF. It was when Daren Wang hatched a hare-brained idea to establish a festival celebrating the spoken/written word that brought the other dreamers and believers together. Tom Bell — founding program director, Linda Harris, Richard Lenz, Alice Murray, Bill Starr and Judy Turner then began brewing the magic.

The DBF got rave reviews shortly after 18 months of hard work and dedication in volunteering full-time, until its commencement over Labor Day weekend back in 2006, which was attended by over 100 authors and 50, 000 people. The success of the event was contributed by the combination of supportive local businesses and restaurants, eager and able volunteers, and the ability to walk easily from venue to venue.

Leola Wilkerson-Williams is a native of Jacksonville, Florida; a retired social worker, and a born-again Christian. She earned a bachelor of science degree in social work from Tuskegee University and an MSW from Florida State University. She is also a member of the Bethel Baptist Institutional Church and Delta Sigma Theta Sorority. Williams enjoys writing poetry, now she makes a breakthrough with her children's book entitled How Joseph Met The President. The story centers a boy named Joseph, a four-year-old who goes to town with his mother, and meets the president and takes a photo with him. This wonderful story of a smart boy is a perfect read for the younger crowd and the beautiful illustrations by Willie F. Vine will only enhance their learning!

The author, together with BookBlastPro will be present at the AJC Decatur Book Festival. The festival-goers and other authors will have the opportunity of getting first-hand information about Williams and her piece, How Joseph Met The President. They will also get bookmarks and an opportunity of photo documentation which will be released after the event. The book selling will be announced at the event.

AJC Decatur Book Festival — Bookzilla, Leola Wilkerson-Williams's book and the rest of the fun activities will make this event a literary powerhouse that will delight the attendees and will make this annual event a huge success, as what Tom Bell expressed: "That's what the festival does best."
