

High Acceptance among Women Users Likely to Increase Demand for Sexual Lubricant Products

According to Arizton Advisory and Intelligence sexual lubricant to add lion share in sexual wellness market in the coming years.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS, US, September 11, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Sexual lubricants, which are also known as personal lubes, help to reduce friction between the penis and the vagina or the rectum, and other body parts during sexual intercourses and masturbation. These lubricants are also applied on sex toys to ease their penetration. Based on the raw materials used, sexual lubricants can be divided into four categories: Water-based, silicone-based, oil-based, and hybrid ones.

The global sexual lubricant market is expected to cross $1.4 billion, growing impressively at a CAGR of 6.7% during 2016–2022. One of the major reasons for growing demand for sexual lubricants can be associated with the increased demand for sex toys worldwide. The demand for sexual lubricants from online channels has been growing worldwide, especially in developing economies such as China and India.

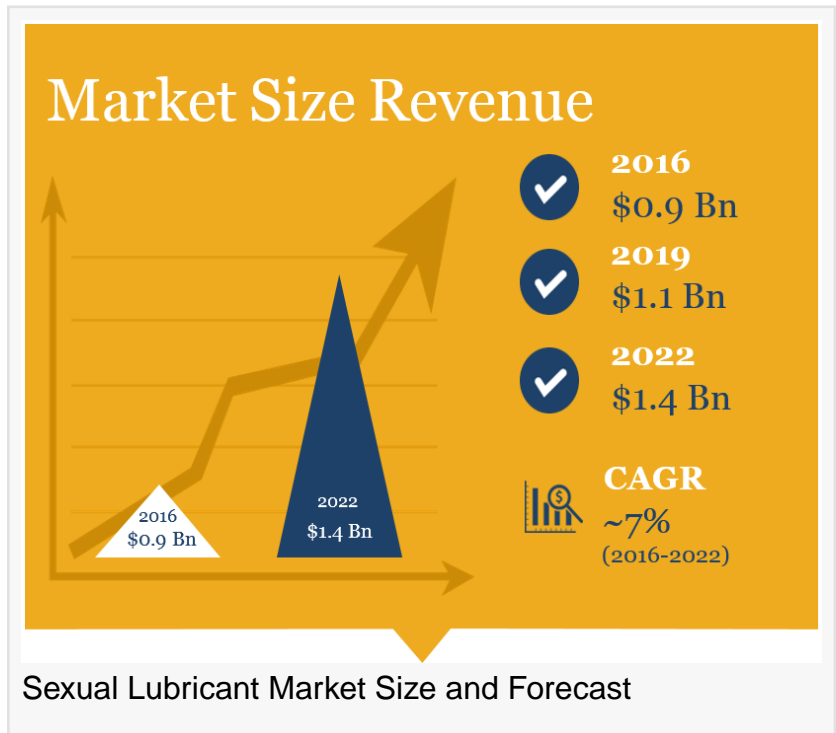

Asian countries such as China and India are expected to push the demand for sexual lubricants. The vendors should focus on increasing awareness and easy availability of lubes to tap the market share.”

Sexual Lubricant Market: Segmental Overview

Silicone-based and hybrid sexual lubricants are the fast-growing segments

The water-based sexual lubricant segment held the leading position in 2016. Water-based sexual lubricants are highly popular among end-users and have a wide customer base. However, this segment is expected to lose market share to the fast-growing silicone-based and hybrid sexual lubricant segments. Despite being losing share, this segment is expected to continue its dominance in terms of usage and acceptance among end-users during the forecast period and is expected to account for 66.84% market share in 2022. The water-based segment is followed by the silicone-based segment.

Sexual Lubricant Market: Geographical Analysis

North America to remain the largest market followed by APAC

The penetration of sexual lubricants in North America is high, and the market revenue has been increasing steadily. For instance, the US witnessed a moderate boost of about 5% in sales of these lubricants in 2016. However, North America is likely to lose some of its market share in the global market to APAC during the forecast period. The market in Europe, which is third largest in the world, is characterized by high demand for water-based and silicone-based sexual lubricants. Though, there is a low penetration of sexual lubricants in many Middle Eastern, Latin American, and African countries. With many vendors expanding their operations in these countries for market share, the demand for these devices will grow during the forecast period.
