PUNE, INDIA, September 12, 2017
/EINPresswire.com/ -- Prebiotic Ingredients Market:

Executive Summary

Prebiotic ingredients are non-digestible substances that provide a beneficial physiological effect on the host by selectively stimulating the favorable growth of limited number of indigenous bacteria. The health-promoting bacteria most commonly augmented by prebiotics include those of the genus Lactobacillus and Bifidobacter, which tend to limit the presence of harmful bacteria in the digestive system. These fibers are proven to provide health benefits such as gut health maintenance, colitis prevention, cancer inhibition, cholesterol removal, immunity enhancement, prevention of obesity and constipation and so on. Global prebiotic ingredients market is estimated to grow at a CAGR of 10.2% to reach $5,673.8m by 2020.
