

Call for Papers for Oxford Summer School 2018

Fifth Annual Oxford Animal Ethics Summer School is on Animal Ethics and Law: Affecting Positive Change for Animals

OXFORD, UK, September 25, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Fifth Annual Oxford Animal Ethics Summer School

Animal Ethics and Law:
Affecting Positive Change for Animals

22 - 25 July, 2018
St Stephen's House, University of Oxford
in partnership with Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman LLP

Animal law has now become a recognised academic subject in its own right alongside animal ethics.

Papers are invited from academics worldwide on topics relating to animal law, animal ethics, and the relation between the two. We welcome a variety of perspectives that have bearing on this relationship, including philosophical and religious ethics, historical, anthropological, psychological, scientific, psychological, and sociological perspectives.

Our particular focus is on how law can affect positive change for animals, including the motivations and strategies for achieving legal reform and issues involving the administration, enforcement and effectiveness of existing legislation. We welcome perspectives from ethicists, legal scholars, barristers and solicitors, law enforcers, anti-cruelty inspectors, politicians, and opinion formers.

We are particularly interested in receiving contributions from countries worldwide in which animal legislation is developing as well as contributions from countries where such legislation is more established.

Abstracts of proposed contributions (no more than 300 words) should be sent to Clair Linzey via email: depdirector@oxfordanimaethics.com. The deadline for abstracts is 1 January 2018. Accepted papers will be considered for publication in a subsequent book volume or in the Journal of Animal Ethics.

St Stephen's House is an Anglican Theological College and a Hall of the University of Oxford. See <https://www.ssho.ox.ac.uk/>.
