ILLUMI is redefining the self-help industry with the first Video On Demand platform for follow-along personal development courses.”

Sean Spector

The Los Angeles startup was founded by husband and wife duo, Sean Spector and Samantha Freedman-Spector. They both share a strong passion for personal development and are determined in making it more accessible no matter where you are. ILLUMI enables you to maintain your personal development without ever disconnecting with courses or other like-minded individuals.

ILLUMI is revolutionizing personal development by being the first ever to offer interactive, follow-along courses that may be streamed at home or on the go. Much like the fitness industry was transformed with at-home workout videos, ILLUMI seeks to make self-help affordable and accessible to everyone. Their startup provides the necessary resources and support system to do so without having to pay thousands of dollars for expensive seminars, retreats, and courses.

ILLUMI is going to drastically change the way people go about seeking personal development resources. With a variety of courses covering a range of self-help and spiritual topics, ILLUMI will become a major name within the self-help industry. For anyone who is searching for effective courses on personal development or spirituality, ILLUMI's IndieGoGo campaign is something you will want to back.
