Automotive Braking System Market 2017

An automotive braking system is a group of hydraulic, electronic, and mechanical components actively used to stop a moving vehicle. The braking system in a vehicle converts the kinetic energy of the wheels into thermal energy produced by the brake thus stopping the vehicle. The speed of a vehicle is inversely proportional to the friction applied on the vehicle, which in turn is directly proportional to the braking of the vehicle.

The analysts forecast the global automotive braking system market to grow at a CAGR of 2.88% during the period 2017-2021.
