

Meet A Life Coach Obsessed With Showing Creative Professionals (& The People Who Support Them) The Keys To Success

Erin Vazquez pursues her passion of destroying the starving artist myth and connect creative and entertainment professionals with the keys to success.

LAS VEGAS, NEVADA, UNITED STATES, October 31, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Erin Vazquez, a Master Certified Neuro-Linguistic Programming practitioner and coach, Time Line Therapy® practitioner and hypnotherapist, has created a comprehensive coaching program designed to assist creative and entertainment industry professionals enjoy success and prosperity while doing what they love. Her services take artists, musicians, comedians, actors, writers and business owners through a process that changes their life by giving them clarity, confidence and the skills to be competitive in a quickly-changing world.

Ever since childhood, Erin had a special affinity for the arts. She was surrounded by music, frequented art museums and had the pleasure of going to live theater on a regular basis. Some of her favorite memories are of seeing iconic movies in historic movie houses. Later in her life, she worked at Comedy Works in Denver, CO where she met Louis C.K. and Bill Burr to name a few and quickly became enamored with their craft. While she was exposed to plenty of successful artists, she was also exposed to some who fit the bill of the struggling or starving artist to a tee. Which got her to thinking: what is the difference between the ones who succeed and those who don't? And how could she help those people who didn't even know what kind of help to ask for?

That question never left her, but she had to overcome some obstacles to her own success before connecting with her true purpose. As a writer, she drifted into the world of marketing where she enjoyed her work and found a niche for creating powerful narratives around business. Even though she enjoyed learning about the fundamentals of business and marketing, the idea of helping creative and entertainment industry professionals never left her and she knew she had to find a way to follow her own heart's desire.

The answer came to her after she attended Unleash The Power within and received coaching from Tony Robbins himself. His advice: the cost of acting out of fear is too great. She knew that to be true: while she denied her purpose she suffered from depression and anxiety, incidentally common conditions for many creative professionals. She decided to take action and became Master Certified Neuro-Linguistic Programming Coach, found a flair for techniques that help people gain emotional strength and opened up a practice where she has so far worked with authors, visual artists, business owners and licensed counselors.

"When my clients have a breakthrough, there's an electricity in the air even if we're meeting over the phone. My favorite part of my job is getting the texts of pictures of my clients at their gallery openings or their book signings. Sometimes I get emails about a realization that leads to opportunities and resources that they never even knew they had with them the whole time," says Ms. Vazquez.

Erin offers a variety of coaching practices, knowing that every one of her clients come to her with different needs. Each one of her programs walk the client through identifying their true desires. Next, she takes her clients through a process to clear barriers that have been building up in the unconscious mind. Then from there, the focus turns to designing and teaching strategies and actions for stepping into greatness and overcoming obstacles with grace along the way. Her coaching services are great for executives and managers in the entertainment and creative industries, as the relationship between the artist and their team has the power to create success and wealth for all involved.

Anyone in the arts or entertainment industry who is ready take their careers to the next level can email Erin to set up a complimentary strategy session. This is a free service offered so that anyone considering investing in a coach can make sure that her services are a good fit on every level.
