

Women Veterans ROCK! Names The 2018 Woman Veteran of The Year

WASHINGTON, DC, USA, November 1, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- On Veterans Day, November 11, 2017, the Women Veterans ROCK! Advocacy Campaign will stand among America's leading veteran service organizations and pay tribute to America's Women Veterans during its Annual Veterans Day Rally and Tribute Program. It will be held at the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Washington, DC. Every year the group recognizes a Women Veteran for her distinguished service, achievements and commitment to serve in the United States Military. This year, Women Veterans ROCK names Sergeant First Class Robin E. Johnson as the 2018 Woman Veteran Honoree of The Year.

Deborah Harmon-Pugh, National Campaign Chair of The Women Veterans ROCK! Advocacy Campaign congratulates Sergeant First Class Johnson for her distinguished portfolio of military service and civilian contributions to society. "She embodies and demonstrates all of the characteristics of the highest national honor from America's Woman Veterans Community. America salutes Sergeant First Class Robin E. Johnson for her superior service to our country which benefits the common good of all humanity," says Deborah Harmon-Pugh.

2018 Woman Veteran of the Year: Sergeant First Class Robin E. Johnson

Sergeant First Class Robin E. Johnson is a Senior Human Resources Sergeant serving the Pennsylvania Army National Guard, (PAARNG), and was selected for this national honor for her many years of superior service in support of deployed military service members from PA, NJ, DE and MD.

She also provides exemplary civilian service to military families as an esteemed volunteer of The Liberty USO. Her committed leadership style within the ranks of America's National Guard has been recognized as a revered, caring coach and mentor dedicated to preparing today's Military Millennials to serve our country and its citizens with honor and excellence.
