

How to put Google Calendar on your macOS Wallpaper

Keep up to date with your macOS wallpaper using DejaDesktop App for Mac

PORTLAND, OR, UNITED STATES, November 3, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- New in the App Store® DejaDesktop takes your Mac, Google or Outlook Calendar and makes a wallpaper background with it. Every day, you can see a monthly calendar with the current day highlighted, look ahead and look behind months, and your current day's schedule. This is perfect for people who use Google and Outlook, because you can see your calendar without opening anything. Every day, when you first look at your PC, you will see your updated Agenda.

“Before computers, people used desktop blotters,” says Wayland Bruns, designer of DejaDesktop. “With Google Calendar, you cannot see your schedule until you open your browser. When my phone alarm rings, I get surprised by something I should have planned for; a doctor’s visit where I need to wear shorts, or a group meeting where I need to prepare an accounting report. Having those items on my desktop calendar helps me keep track of the shape of my whole week and month.”

DejaDesktop Calendar Wallpaper is free if you just need the month view with the look ahead months. For Mac data feed, it is $4.99 available as an in-app purchase. You can also purchase data feeds for Google $9.99 and Outlook $19.99. The software works by keeping your current schedule on your Mac, and burning today's calendar into your screen backdrop picture. It will automatically update every day, or whenever you change your schedule in iCal, Google or Outlook. You can download it from the App Store at <https://itunes.apple.com/us/app/dejadesktop-calendar-wallpaper/id1275174795>.
