

GlobalSim Joins Utah Governor Herbert on a Trade Mission in Jordan and Israel

Jonathan McCurdy, President and CEO of GlobalSim, had the opportunity to join Gary Herbert, Governor of Utah, for a trade mission in Jordan and Israel.

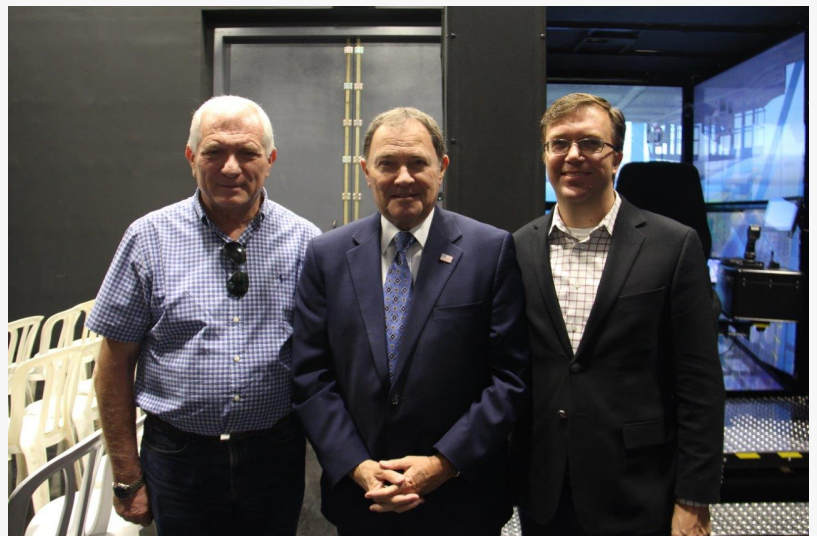

SANDY, UTAH, UNITED STATES, November 6, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- GlobalSim, Inc. has a long reputation in the field of simulation. Beyond crane simulators, GlobalSim has worked on projects with governments, defense contractors and multi-national corporations.

Last week, Jonathan McCurdy, President and CEO of GlobalSim, had the opportunity to join Gary Herbert, Governor of Utah, along with the directors from 40 different companies in Utah for a trade mission in Jordan and Israel.

The trade mission was an excellent opportunity for all parties to expand Utah's economic development in the Middle East. One of the scheduled visits, was a trip to the Port of Ashdod – one of Israel's two main cargo ports, also home to one of Globalsim's premium simulators. McCurdy showcased the simulator where Gov. Herbert and Utah directors experimented with the simulator.

The visit to Jordan and Israel also allowed GlobalSim to connect with important executives looking to provide simulation solutions in the region. "We have long had a global footprint and we look forward to doing more business in Israel and the Middle East" remarked McCurdy.

GlobalSim looks forward to any future collaborative trade missions.
