KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI, UNITED STATES, November 10, 2017

/EINPresswire.com/ -- When many of us imagine attaining the highest level of success, becoming wealthy often ranks highest on our level of achievements. The truth is that living a life of purpose and fulfillment is not guaranteed by how much money we make during our lifetime.

According to Marilyn Macha, “The original meaning of wealth is actually happiness and wellbeing; we’ve morphed its definition the amount of money required to be happy.”

Macha is an esteemed executive coach and celebrated key note speaker with over 30 years of experience in the investment advisory field. She is the Amazon #1 bestselling author of the thought-provoking book Real Wealth Revealed, the first book in a four-book series.

“I have been coaching clients since I began in the financial planning service,” says Macha. “I primarily work with strong, influential, professional woman who truly want to know their value more deeply. They have the desire to go beyond the level of success they have attained and strengthen their ability to make a major impact in the world.”

Many women think they must give up who they really are to become high achievers. Macha says this is absolutely untrue. In actuality, the closer one is aligned with their optimal self, the more successful they will become. It takes courage, clarity and determination of purpose.

"I love tapping into the wisdom and value within us that can advance people and their relationships with themselves and their clients," explains Marilyn. "This prompted me to create a vision for what I was to do in the world."

Macha has an effective three-part strategy within her own structure of how she supports her clients to go beyond their level of success. She promises that her clients will never let a situation or circumstance thwart their progress when they are clear of their desires and know the activating purpose underneath their goals. Macha holds three certifications in executive coaching, providing fresh ideas and techniques for her clients, including strategies and procedures that support them in discovering their innate value.

"What I want women to know is that I support revealing the magnificence that is always inside them and my participation with them is simply to assist them in their own discovery of their strengths, values and greatness," says Macha. "My investment in the world is for people to embrace their greatness, that's the bottom line for me. This is my deepest purpose in my business and in my life."

CUTV News Radio will feature Marilyn Macha in an interview with Jim Masters on November 14th at 2pm EST.
