Life's Time Capsule Services, Inc. (OTC Pink: LTCP) just announced the acquisition of all of the assets of New York Post Publishing, Inc., including its online website and fifty percent of the Towers Financial Corporation's victims' restitution claims against the New York Post Newspaper.

With its newly acquired assets, Management believes it will be able to proceed to meet requirements to be listed on NASDAQ.

Both of these assets, acquired from Towers Investors.com, Inc.,

Management believes that we will have over four million card users and millions in revenue in 2018 and cross-selling of other services will be another source of revenues for LTCP. The valuation per card user and the revenue component should raise the overall valuation of LTCP significantly during the coming year.

"We now have substantial assets, key relationships and technical expertise in place to execute upon our plan to build a multibillion-dollar company. This acquisition is the first phase of transitioning LTCP from a social media and data storage provider to a technology holding company with a multitude of products and services collectively integrated under one entity to build shareholder value," said Frank Brady, Chief Executive Officer of Life's Time Capsule Services, Inc. (LTCP).

Life's Time Capsule (OTC Pink: LTCP) also recently announced the launch of "MarketPlace". Read the full press release on Emerging Growth.com.

Marketplace, priced at $3.97 per month, will provide a substantial residual revenue stream with the highest margins from our suite of services. We are projecting a $1M per month revenue stream by the third quarter of 2018, which is based on our goal of 250,000 subscribers over the next twelve months, followed by over 500,000 subscribers over a period of 24 months.

This is probably the only thing Facebook (NASDAQ: FB) is missing. Facebook showcases all aspects of its user's daily lives. But what happens after life? Facebook needs a "Time capsule" model like this.
