Global Dietary Supplements Market 2017-2022

According to the report, Global dietary supplements market is projected to expand at a CAGR of 7.76% over the forecast period to reach a total market size of US$195.206 billion by 2022.

A dietary supplement is a product that is intended to add nutritional value to an individual's diet. The dietary or nutritional supplement may be a vitamin, mineral, amino acid, herb or others. It may be in the form of tablets, capsules, soft gels, gels, liquids, or powders. Consumption of these supplements ensures the intake of an appropriate amount of nutrients that a body requires for proper functioning also helps in mitigating the risk of certain diseases. Over the past decade, there has been a huge surge in the sales of dietary supplements owing to greater health awareness, bolstered by an increase in consumer awareness for preventive healthcare, a rise in ageing population, and expansion of sales channels especially due to higher internet penetration across developing economies.
