

Facial Feminization Clinic, 2pass, Offers Leading Tracheal Shave Procedures

With tracheal shave procedures on the rise, 2pass Clinic announces its role as one of the leading providers of tracheal shave surgeries in the world.

BERCHEM, BELGIUM, BELGIUM, November 20, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- 2pass Clinic, headquartered in Belgium and providing facial feminization to clients around the world, is a leading provider of the tracheal shave procedure designed to enhance femininity by reducing the appearance of the Adam's apple.

Males develop an Adam's apple during puberty. As they grow and develop, cartilage surrounds the front part of the larynx, or "voice box". As boys grow older and their voices continue to deepen, the Adam's apple grows larger and protrudes from the skin. This is one of the primary concerns among transgender women seeking to feminize their appearance, and 2pass Clinic has the solution.

A tracheal shave, also known as Adam's apple removal, is a relatively simple procedure designed to remove the cartilage around the larynx. Patients are placed under general anesthesia during the procedure, which does not cause damage to the vocal cords and leaves a very tiny scar located just below the chin. Swelling may be present for the first 48 hours after the procedure, and you may experience pain for seven to 10 days. However, the team at 2pass Clinic will help you manage your pain with medications and therapeutic practices.

Numerous patients have experienced outstanding results with the tracheal shave procedure from 2pass Clinic, and they travel to Belgium from around the world for the spa-like, luxurious treatment they receive before, during, and after their procedures. Though, a tracheal shave can provide a more feminine appearance, the surgery does not change the pitch of the patient's voice. For this, the experts recommend training with the 2Pass Clinic Voice App.
