PUNE, INDIA, November 22, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ --

The analysts forecast the global Construction Glass market to grow at a CAGR of 5.98% during the period 2017-2021.

Construction glass is a translucent glazing material, which is mainly used in external walls and windows as a building material. It has many chemical and physical properties, such as thermal insulation, solar control, safety and security, fire resistance, noise control, chemical resistance, electric resistance, interior design, flexible molding, and stability in changing climatic condition. The construction sector is one of the major end-users of glass. Almost 80% of flat glass manufactured is used in construction applications. Benefits such as safety, security, environmental protection, and natural insulation, offered by such architectural glass are leading to its steady rise in use, both in commercial and residential buildings.
