Ukraine's Got Talent Winner Kseniya Simonova Unveils Brand-new Animation Style for an Israeli band's Music Video

ASHDOD, ISRAEL , November 25, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- International sand animation artist Kseniya Simonova has collaborated with the Israeli band Soul Enema on a new music video titled "Eternal Child". The visuals are created in a unique animation technique, pioneered by Simonova on the basis of liquid Plasticine.

Simonova herself refers to this new format as 'plastic animation'. "It is a very rich technique — rich in details, in color, in the way of thinking. When I was a child, I loved playing and creating with Plasticine. I arrived at this technique after a long period of experimentation in my studio and consultations with scientists. Who knows, maybe this technique will become the hottest new trend in the world of live and stop motion animation... I don't know. But I felt that I want to continue working with it".

Simonova explains that she was really impressed upon hearing the song: "I was simply in love with it. The deep lyrics and brilliant music. Constantin Glantz, the band's mastermind, turned to me with an idea for collaboration. I was truly glad to accept it, and now you can see the result".

"We are extremely grateful to Kseniya Simonova", says Soul Enema's Constantin Glantz. "She's the leading sand animation artist in the world and an inventor of original techniques - I've been an admirer of her art for a long time. She totally loved the song, and her masterful work is a great visual counterpart to the things we wanted to express musically and lyrically: nostalgia about one's long-gone childhood and rediscovery of the will to live, learn and follow your dreams. That inner child - the lost and found".

Simonova first rose to prominence in 2009, winning that year's Ukraine's Got Talent competition and becoming an online sensation. She has since performed in over 30 countries around the globe and took part in dozens of multimedia productions.

"Eternal Child" is taken from Soul Enema's second album "Of Clans and Clones and Clowns", released earlier this year. It was in fact a multinational production prior to Simonova's visual contribution, featuring the lead guitar work of Dutch musician and producer Arjen Lucassen, best known as the mastermind behind the all-star project Ayreon.
