The findings revealed satisfaction levels across various areas, with Akanagi Group's two platforms ranking first and second in a number of categories, including: IT and web functionality, ease of doing business, business development (BDM) support / practice development support and administrative support.

Kaiji Ota, Head of Wealth Product Investing and Financial Services Group, said Akanagi Group is delighted to be recognized in this independent industry survey.

"As a business that is focused on collecting and acting on feedback from the advisers who use our platforms every day, this review provides us with valuable insights into how they view the service and support we provide," Mr. Ota said.

"We're proud to have been ranked first and second across a number of categories and believe this is due to the continuous evolution of our platforms to ensure we keep delivering what advisers need to service their clients to a high standard and run an efficient business."

"We've made enhancements in direct response to adviser feedback. This included requests for more tailored investment solutions and an expanded choice of assets, which led to the addition of separately managed accounts to the platforms, as well as international listed securities and domestic fixed income securities as investment options."
