

Mary Strazzeri of Safety First Consulting to be Featured on CUTV News Radio

CONCORD, ONTARIO, CANADA, December 4, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Safety is an added cost for any organization. Too often organizations focused strictly on the bottom line and are willing to overlook safety measures in the interest of increased production.

Since 2005, Safety First has helped to ensure a safe and healthy work environment for both their clients and their employees.

Safety First Consulting is a health and safety management company that provides proactive health and safety solutions to employers across Canada. Led by its founder and president, Mary Strazzeri, Safety First's team of dedicated expert professionals, help employer organizations achieve complete compliance with government health and safety regulations.

"We're a liaison between the employer and the government.," says Strazzeri. "Really good employers want to be proactive and they want to have everything in place before they even start a job. Other employers will contact us because they were caught disregarding safety regulations and they have no choice. Our job is just to make recommendations for a better, safer work site."

Each province uses different sets of legislation regulating health and safety and employers are obligated to follow that legislation. Safety First Consulting begins with an audit of your company's current health and safety program. This audit identifies any present or potential problems in your system, and will lead to recommendations on how to go about solving and preventing these issues.

Strazzeri describes her clients as "powerhouses."

They're very driven. They want to make sure that they're safe and that if they have to go to court that they have enough due diligence behind them because of the services that we provide. Whether it's inspections, training, orientations, programs, Safety First can develop a package of solutions and even save you money on attorneys.

"There are so many safety regulations: working at heights, using ladders, hole openings, housekeeping, personal protective equipment, just to name a few. We're kept up-to-date because we are constantly engaged in professional development and have a good understanding of the law and upcoming changes to legislation. We're taking courses all the time," says Strazzeri. "That's why I see us expanding. We're already growing exponentially. Our name is really great out there. I do see us moving into other provinces and eventually the United States."

CUTV News Radio will feature Mary Strazzeri in an interview with Jim Masters on December 6th at 10am EST.
