About CDN

A CDN is a system of interconnected computers used to deliver web content, through the Internet, to a large number of end-users worldwide.

This mass delivery of content is achieved by duplicating the content on several servers, which are spread across different geographies, and directing the content to end-users when required. The CDN is used by the Internet service providers to offer dynamic or static web pages. It is extremely useful for audio or video streaming and programming Internet TV.

Technavio's analysts forecast the global CDN market to grow at a CAGR of 25.45% over the period 2014-2019.
