

Online Dating Pop-Up Shop for Christmas

Sharing intimate details from I LOVE YOU, SEND MONEY with Wellington Shoppers

WELLINGTON, NZ, December 18, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Wellington author, Jordan Alexander, has written a book about online dating...but it's not a 'how-to' guide. Her book, "I love you, send money" is more about what NOT to do when going online to look for love.

Dr Alexander, a professional, well-educated, business woman, is not someone you'd expect COULD fall for a romance scam: "Five years ago, if you asked if I could get duped while online dating, I'd have replied, 'no way...not a chance'."

Alexander's true story was featured on RadioLIVE last week in an interview with Mark Sainsbury. Her experience lands her with thousands of romance scam victims in NZ and across the globe. With technology being more sophisticated and online dating on the increase, potential scammers have more prey. During the holiday season, registrations for online dating sites peak. Alexander wants people to go online for love, and to be safe when they do.

"I love you, send money" shares intimate details, emails and exchanges of Alexander's experience. Reviewers say her 'bare all' story is: "sassy, humorous and gripping..." and how they "experienced every human emotion..." when reading the book.

A great Christmas gift, "I love you, send money" is available in paperback, audio and eBook formats. You can get yours online at: Iloveyousendmoney.com

Local shoppers in Wellington can also wander downtown to 67 Manners Street and meet the author. Her temporary premises include books for sale, along with some local artworks. She shares safety tips for online daters in the shop window - her YouTube video "Ten top traps to avoid when online dating."

Don't delay – the pop-up shop – like Alexander's cash – is gone by Christmas.
