We're raising money. Humanity continues to depend evermore on the wealth generated by highly mechanised and automated businesses.

LONDON, UNITED KINGDOM, January 4, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Humanity continues to depend evermore on the wealth generated by highly mechanised and automated businesses. We also depend on the uninterrupted supply of power, energy, data. More then ever these in turn depend on the continued integrity of physical assets.

Marine Asset Maintenance Programmes are archaic and arbitrary. Some Organisations are adopting Predictive Maintenance/Condition Monitoring however, Marine Assets are evermore complex in technical design; there comes an exponential rise in the variety and severity of failure consequences. We must ensure our Maintenance Programmes are optimised to improve reliability and availability, cost efficiently. This will also pave the way for digital transformation.

At RELMAR, we are driven to helping our clients achieve improved asset dependability, through the latest science, technology and knowledge."

Kenneth Shakesby, Relmar
CEO

We have the solution called Marine Reliability-Centred Maintenance [m]RCM that is scalable and valid for global shipping and the global Oil and Gas Industry.
