

Literacy Expert Dr. Myrtle Welch to be Featured on CUTV News Radio

PALM BAY, FLORIDA, UNITED STATES, January 8, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Dr. Myrtle Welch is a retired professor and author of Reading as a Struggle: Challenged Readers Making Meaning from Text. Dr. Welch is also and founder of MIB Institute, a global and digital learning process program through which she teaches college students in East Africa at STAWA University to be readers to be writers and authors.

“I aspire to help students as long as possible,” says Dr. Welch. “Teaching is my calling and my gift from God and I love doing it. When the students accomplish their goals with high achievements, I realize they can have a better life.”

Dr. Welch began her career in 1969, teaching English and eventually pursued her Masters degree in Reading, earned five certifications. In 2007, Dr. Welch earned her PhD in curriculum and instruction, specializing in reading.

Dr. Welch questioned why some students are called “struggling readers” and why are they so labeled in the achievement gap according to NAEP—National Assessment of Educational Progress.

In 2011, Provost Larry Maka invited her to Uganda, where she lectured, researched and collaborated with African students and teachers. Her emphasis and teachings on writing and English earned her the honor of having a writing center at STAWA University named the Dr. Myrtle Welch Writing Center, where she developed her theory of learning, Emancipatory View Of Struggle in 2005.

“EVOS is a highly effective way to free students from the struggles of learning,” says Dr. Welch. “It theorizes how all young persons are unequivocally born with a unique gift, and it is the teacher’s job to identify that gift. The teacher should encourage that student to use his or her gift to enhance their personal reading skills.”

Dr. Welch also developed the methodology within EVOS she calls the 3H Writing Formula, using your heart, head and hands to guide students to write adeptly and skillfully anything they would like such as poetry or a book. The 3H Writing Formula begins in your heart where your passion lies, and it guides you to figure out what your book will be about, then it will move to your head where you develop your ideas, and finally your writing moves to your hand where you write with passion.

Utilizing the 3H Writing Formula, Dr. Welch experienced extraordinary results with her students who wrote magnificent poems, stories, and essays and books. Seeing her students excel is the reason, Dr. Welch will never give up teaching.

“One of the mottos I often tell my students is ‘Keep the Lord in your heart, sense in your head, and money in your pocket,” says Dr. Welch. “As long as they are good Christians and appropriately educated they will ultimately acquire the money needed to be liberated from misfortune.”
