Gaston Browne, the prime minister of Antigua has invited Harry and Meghan to come back to Antigua for their honeymoon after Harry visited in November 2016 on official business.

choosing Nevis as their honeymoon destination could be incorporated into that especially when it holds such fond memories for Harry”

Antigua has some of the most luxurious resorts to offer, Nonsuch Bay, Sugar Ridge and Blue Waters to name a few. Exceptional Villas, predicts if they were to choose Antigua that they will choose the famous Jumby Bay that is a popular resort for VIPs and celebrities from all over the world.

Jumby Bay is an exclusive private island just off Antigua. The all-inclusive resort is the ideal choice for Harry and Meghan to enjoy their honeymoon because Jumby Bay Resort is extremely private and a complete paradise without having to worry about paparazzi or being disturbed throughout their vacation

Nevis could be the perfect honeymoon choice for the couple as the island provides a combination of beach bliss and a closeness to nature. The island holds fond memories for Harry who holidayed on the island with his brother and mother Diana in 1993.

Previously Harry stayed at the Montpelier Plantation and Beach which is perfect for a honeymoon but Harry may want to try out somewhere new such as Paradise Beach which has a handful of totally private villas that are so luxurious and romantic for a honeymoon trip.

“The island of Nevis could be such a fantastic option for the couple as Meghan’s ring includes diamonds from Diane’s own jewellery collection to which the couple have said it makes her feel a part of their celebrations. Therefore "choosing Nevis as their honeymoon destination could be incorporated into that especially when it holds such fond memories for Harry.” Said Niamh McCarthy who is a Travel Specialist for Exceptional Villas.

JAMAICA

Exceptional Villas also think that Jamaica could be another highly tipped choice for the couples Honeymoon as Harry and Meghan have already had a short vacation to the island last year. The couple visited the island last march for Harry’s good friend Tom Inskip wedding and reports suggest they loved every moment of their visit. Actually, Jamaica has been a very popular vacation choice for the British Royal Family for years and royal members often stay at the luxurious Half Moon Resort in Montego Bay while on the island.

ANGUILLA

The Caribbean island of Anguilla could also be another wonderful choice for Harry and Meghan as it is one of the most popular honeymoon destinations in the world. The island is currently recovering from hurricane Irma this past September. Meghan and Harry are well known for their humanitarian and charity work throughout the world so it would be no surprise if they decided to go to Anguilla and to show their support and to show the world that the island is recovering and is ready for people to come visit again. Anguilla has been steadily bouncing back from the devastation and is back on the road to recovery. The island of Anguilla has always been a popular vacation spot with A-list celebrities and royals for years as it has some of the most amazing resorts and beaches in the world. The island offers some of the world's most gorgeous five-star luxury resorts to choose from including the Maliouhana, Frangipani, Cap Juluca, CuisinArt and the Four Seasons Resort. The Four Seasons formally the Viceroy Resort is scheduled to reopen this April. Exceptional Villas think The Four Seasons Resort could be a likely choice for the couple as it is located on an excellent beach and the resort is very private and has a very laid back vibe which is what the royal couple will be seeking on this special trip.
