PUNE, INDIA, January 9, 2018 / EINPresswire.com/ -- Global Facade Market

Global Facade market was estimated USD 194.07 billion in the year 2016. Rising real estate developments along with the introduction of advanced materials with higher strength and visually appealing texture are some of the major reason behind the huge development of the market. Facades are those part of the buildings which comprises both appealing looks and performances. Facades help in temperature management of the buildings owing to which these are popular among the builders and contractors.

Currently, the industry is dominated by classic designs with stiff & elegant looks and feel, however, modern facades with advanced and light materials are anticipated to witness significant growth over the coming years. Advantages such as resistance to the adverse weather conditions and unwanted intrusions detections are some of the major behind the significant growth of modern facades over the forecast period.
