Global Chocolate Market Research Report

Chocolate is one of the most consumed food product across the globe. Chocolates are typically sweet and are made from cocoa seeds, cocoa liquor, cocoa butter, milk and sugar and are often served with different varieties of flavors. Moreover, in order to survive with the intensifying competition in the market, the chocolate vendors use different flavors such as ginger, lavender, and hibiscus among others to tempt customers into buying their variety of chocolate products. Chocolates with organic ingredients are increasingly gaining traction in the market and are being offered at a premium price.

The global market for chocolates is driven by extensive utilization of chocolates in confectionary items and flavored food products. Moreover, chocolates are being used as functional goods owing to their nutritional value and aid in relieving stress, leading to increasing consumption over the forecast period. However, fluctuations in raw material prices and excessive reliance on unstable economies for the supply of cocoa is restraining the market growth.

Asia Pacific region is expected to drive the global chocolate market owing to a huge population with large proportion of youth and children. Other than changing taste preferences, factors like growing purchasing power of middle class in the region which impacted the demand significantly along with rapid urbanization and better lifestyle of consumers are likely to propel the market growth of chocolates. Moreover, utilisation of chocolate products as confectionary and flavors drive the market too. North America and Europe is expected to drive the global market for chocolates majorly over forecasted period.

Key industry players involved in the market are Lindt & Sprungli, Nestle, Mars, Incorporated, Ferrero and Meiji Holdings Co., among others.
