A burrito is a type of Mexican food, which is wheat flour tortilla rolled or wrapped with a filling into a closed-ended cylinder, in contrast to a taco, where the tortilla is simply folded around the filling. The global packaged foods market is driven by factors such as convenience of packaged foods in terms of preparation and consumption, changing lifestyles. However, factors like risks of food contamination, stringent government regulations pertaining to the manufacture and sale of packaged foods, and emergence of local brands can limit the growth rate of the market over the next five years.
