by David Farrell, FYI Music News

TORONTO, ONTARIO, CANADA, January 16, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- If we are to measure a person by their achievements, Harris Institute's founder and president, John Harris, has to be to be one of the Canadian music industry's most underrated success stories past or present.

His namesake, Harris Institute, ranked best private school for a 6th year in Jim Lamarche's 2018 'Media Arts Education Report'. The annual index that serves as the quintessential source of information on media arts education in Canada states, "Harris Institute is the best school of its kind. Highly Recommended".

Alumni and faculty contributed to Leonard Cohen's Memorial Concert on CBC, Neil Young's live concert from Omemee, Shania Twain's Grey Cup half-time show, Gord Downie's Juno-winning Secret Path, The Weeknd's #1 album Starboy and Oscar-nominated 'Earned It', The Tragically Hip's final concert film and Alessia Cara's Platinum album, Know It All.

The man behind it all likes to bang the drum about his graduates and their accomplishments and has forever taken the long-road in building the faculty and the curricula over personal aggrandizement.

"The school's results are due to a remarkable 62-member faculty that includes many award-winning leaders", Harris says in an interview. "We set out 29 years ago to strengthen the Canadian music industry, and our graduates are now helping to achieve that objective".
