About Argan Oil

Argan oil is extracted from the kernel of argan fruit. Argan trees are widespread in Morocco. The increasing demand for non-timber products has essentially driven the need to preserve local conservatives. Argan trees are among those trees that have gained significant traction. The growing inclination of consumers toward bio-based and botanical ingredients in various products ranging from food: cosmetics, and pharmaceuticals is driving the demand for argan oil. The increasing use of argan oil in cosmetics is because of its rich properties that help in nourishing hair and skin. It is used in culinary applications because of its omega fatty acid content that helps in regulating cholesterol. Argan oil used as a food ingredient helps in fighting vitamin deficiency, low metabolism, and heart problems. Increasing use of argan oil in pharmaceutical products has prompted its global demand. These applications have led the manufacturers to develop new formulations using argan oil. In 2017, cosmetics was leading application segment. Growing awareness about the properties of argan oil is creating demand from the cosmetics segment.

Technavio's analysts forecast the global argan oil market to grow at a CAGR of 20.03% during the period 2018-2022.
