

Roger Stone: NFL Corruption Redux?

The NFL is facing another crisis with players injuries becoming more public.

WASHINGTON, DC, UNITED STATES, January 30, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Roger Stone, an advisor to President Trump and political guru, posted on his website, StoneColdTruth.com, a call for the NFL to address players injuries.

As the Super Bowl approaches, and the mainstream media is flooded with promotional spots put out by the NFL, we can't but help feel that this year is different. It is obvious that the sport is in a declining state, using viewership and attendance numbers alone to tell the tale. What hasn't been so obvious is the reason why the NFL and their chairman Roger Goodell, are letting this happen.

I say letting this happen, because the wounds upon the NFL are surely self-inflicted. What was supposed to be an a-political popular sport has turned into a partisan slugfest with all the trappings of an orchestrated operation designed to create political divisions. Normally, when viewing such activity, it would be prudent to assume dirty tricks being played to distract from an unfolding narrative that ran counter to the orchestrator's best interests. Here at Stone Cold Truth, that's what we first thought was going on, put into play by the Left to distract from the trove of scandals being uncovered today in Washington, D.C. After our research, we've amended our position.

Before we continue let it be said that we simply love the sport of football. We've watched it in our youth, played it amongst friends, and have been lifelong fans. To be sure, we who put this story together are saddened by making this report. It is our profound hope that the NFL will make a course correction, right the ship, and carry on with smooth sailing, restoring our National Pastime to former glory.

Now on with the report.

Roger Goodell is no stranger to politics. His father, Charles Goodell was a Republican U.S. Representative and then later a Senator from the State of New York. As such, Roger Goodell has been 'plugged in' from almost the time he could speak.

Many don't know that it was Charles Goodell who was hand selected by then New York Governor Nelson A. Rockefeller to replace the just assassinated Robert F. Kennedy. Charles was the youngest Republican Senator of his day. As a serious researcher of the Kennedy family along with the various conspiracies swirling around them, and as a top author on the subject, many longtime followers will know that little credence in placed in the official narratives released at the time of these events.

Even though Charles Goodell was a registered Republican, hand selected by the same, his views stilted more to the left. In fact, the primary reason why he lost his Senate seat in 1970 was because he introduced a bill to cut off funding to the Vietnam war. At the end, Spiro T. Agnew, then Vice President to President Richard Nixon, publicly disavowed Charles Goodell, calling him a “Radical Liberal”.

With this historical perspective to provide context, there were these nagging little details about the NFL Social Justice narrative that caused us to revisit it, a metaphorical check-under-the-hood if you will. In our January 18th, 2018 piece on InfoWars War Room with Owen Shroyer, we first discussed our initial findings, and they weren’t pretty.

Information regarding the NFL Concussion Settlement had been pointed out to us around January 15th. Our source was anonymous, but the tip was sound. The basis of the tip was the recently released statistics from the official NFL website www.nflconcussionsettlement.com. The statistics show that after four years of legal fighting, and over a year of time since a supposed settlement was reached, only a tiny fraction of the players have been paid for their lifelong traumatic injuries. We, like many of you, were not fully aware of this monumental lawsuit and resulting settlement, but a well-trained political nose can always smell a rat. When we saw these statistics, everything just snapped into place for us. It became, and still is, our opinion that the reason why Goodell is allowing the NFL to commit seppuku on the knife of social justice, is to distract from the fact that they are not honoring the settlement payout agreement. Using a lesser negative to cover for a greater negative is indeed a trick out of the Book of Political Dirty Tricks. Why is the Concussion Settlement a greater negative? Because it shows clearly that the sport of football, as played today, is destroying the lives of the players and that of their families too. Is it still as entertaining to watch teams slam into each other on the scrimmage line knowing that most of them will be permanently scarred from it? Not for us it isn’t.

We concluded the report by vowing to dig deeper into the nitty gritty of this story, and what we uncovered shocked us. Seeing what we’ve seen over the years, and being as jaded as we are, shocking us is not easy to do.

When we start going through some of the statistics, it is import to consider that for every number you see, there is an entire support network of family and friends who are affected by these grave series of events.

The NFL’s handling of the traumatic head injuries lawsuit settlement has left thousands upon thousands of former professional football players in dire straits. Many of the former players were and are still suffering from a variety of severe ailments like Early Onset Alzheimer’s, Parkinson’s, dementia, and other Chronic Traumatic Encephalopathy (CTE) symptoms.

The billion dollars “NFL Concussion Settlement”, a disingenuous name assigned by the NFL themselves, was supposed to be an all-encompassing uncapped solution for the players and the NFL in response to the multiple lawsuits directed at the NFL by the players and their representatives. It took four years of fighting to reach the effective date of January 7, 2017. The injured players, an overwhelming number of whom are African-American, were relieved when they were told that their payments would be swift and hassle-free.
