Email Hippo welcomes new General Manager

Email Hippo Limited, one of the South West's fastest growing software companies, has appointed Adam Thompson as General Manager.

He joins the team in Launceston, at the company's Development Centre, where Email Hippo's cloud-based software is designed, engineered and supported.

"Email Hippo has experienced rapid growth and I'm excited about helping to take it to the next stage," said Adam. "We've ambitious targets and new products in the pipeline, and I'm thrilled to come on board at this stage of the company's development. As a Cornishman, it's very pleasing to be working for a company based in Cornwall that's delivering first class service all over the world."

Adam's extensive skill set will be given a workout at Email Hippo as the company continues to grow and dominate the international email and identity validation sector.

Rowland O'Connor, CEO of Email Hippo, said: "Adam will be key in moving the company into the next phase of our development, and his skills and experience will help us develop our services further and deliver them worldwide."

Adam joins Email Hippo from OneServe – Exeter's cloud-based field service management software company that grew from a fledgling system to an award winning, influential service provider under his leadership.
