

Co-working space opens in Leipzig's tallest building

BERLIN, DEUTSCHLAND, February 6, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In March rent24, one of the leading European co-working and co-living providers, is opening its first site in Leipzig. In the near future Start-ups, freelancers and established companies will have a new place to work in the famous City-Hochhaus Leipzig at Augustusplatz 9. At rent24 workplaces in both open areas and private offices will be complemented by shared lounge areas. The conference rooms and event areas can be used both by tenants and external visitors.

"Leipzig is an exciting location with great potential for us," explains Robert Bukvic, Founder and CEO of rent24 GmbH. "The city is constantly developing and is increasingly the birthplace of new tech ideas and innovations." Regular networking events as well as sport and leisure courses add to the rent24 portfolio, allowing people to get to know each other informally and creating a pleasant atmosphere within the community. "We're bringing the flair of Berlin to Leipzig," commented Bukvic. Besides a magnificent view, co-workers can expect an innovative space with the unique rent24 design.

At 40,000 square meters, Augustusplatz is one of the largest city squares in Germany and offers an interesting mix of modern and traditional architecture, which gives the place its special charm. The rent24 co-working space is only a few minutes' walk away from the old town with numerous cafés, restaurants and shopping opportunities. Directly adjacent to the location are the Gewandhaus concert hall, Leipzig opera house and the impressive Paulinum.
