Ageing population is growing considerably across the globe. According to WHO, between 2000 and 2050, the proportion of the world's population over 60 years will double from about 11% to 22%. The absolute number of people aged 60 years and over is expected to increase from 605 million to 2 billion over the same period. The number of people aged 80 years or above will have almost quadrupled between 2000 and 2050 to 395 million. According to UN (United Nations Org), over the next 15 years, the number of older persons is expected to grow fastest in the Caribbean and Latin America with a projected 71% increase in the population aged 60 years or over. Other regions with growing older populations includes Asian (66%), Africa (64%), Oceania (47%), Northern America (41%) and Europe (23%). Elderly population is more prone to chronic diseases, and synthetic biology opens the way for tailoring treatments by developing new drugs and vaccines.

Geographically the global synthetic biology Market is segmented into North America, Europe, Asia-Pacific (APAC) and Rest of the World (RoW). North America has the highest market share owing to increased aging population and rising prevalence of chronic diseases in the region. APAC is growing at a highest rate majorly due to aging population, increasing prevalence of chronic diseases and growing awareness among innovative and advanced applications of genetically modified products.
