"I do believe that the stars have aligned," proclaimed David Howe, SubscriberWise founder, national child guardian, and U.S. Credit Czar. "I made it to Texas – unplanned, unscheduled, and unexpectedly -- and I'll be in San Antonio for the NCTC Winter Educational Conference.

"And I couldn't be more delighted that I was able to prioritize my demanding calendar because San Antonio is such a fabulous city and because the Credit Czar so dearly loves the inhabitants of the Lone Star State," Howe added.

"For the record, just seven months ago, I had the privilege to visit the Texas State Capitol to offer Governor Abbott's Office greetings while also advocating the Credit Czar's critical work protecting Texas babies and children. Every day, the nation's innocent children are exploited by fraud and predatory behavior because lawmakers have failed to implement technology solutions that would dramatically reduce this USA child safety crisis.

I made it to Texas – unplanned, unscheduled, and unexpectedly -- and I'll be in San Antonio for the NCTC Winter Educational Conference.”

“Yes, it's been an extraordinary and hectic effort to coordinate a last-second trip,” concluded Howe. “One could even argue that the Credit Captain ‘broke all the rules’ to make it happen. However, the benefits that will flow from this important annual event, including the myriad educational and networking opportunities with industry professionals, more than justify the notion that rules are sometimes meant to be broken.”
