Scope

- The emergence of digital banks is likely to accelerate a shift towards electronic payments in Italy. The German-based mobile-only bank N26 launched its services in Italy in December 2015, allowing consumers to conduct banking transactions entirely on their mobile phones. Similarly, in 2013 Banca Nazionale del Lavoro (BNL) launched Hello Bank!, a digital-only bank that offers customers standard banking features. In January 2017, UniCredit Bank announced plans to launch the mobile-only buddybank, which will offer current accounts, credit and debit cards, personal loans, and 24/7 personal assistance. According to the bank, buddybank will be available on the Apple App Store from January 29, 2018.

- To capitalize on the rising preference for alternative payments, international payment service providers are strengthening their presence in Italy. In May 2017, Apple launched its payment solution Apple Pay, enabling Apple users to make payments in-store, in-app, and online. In March 2015, Sweden-based company Seamless entered the Italian payments market with the launch of its Seqr mobile payment app. Similarly, in August 2015 US carrier billing service provider Boku acquired mobileview Italia, another carrier billing service provider. This acquisition provides Boku with access to 87 million mobile subscriptions. PayPal partnered with Vodafone in February 2016, enabling its customers to make contactless payments by linking their accounts to the Vodafone Wallet.

- To promote electronic payments, the No Cash Day Project was launched in 2011. The project, sponsored by the government, was launched to raise awareness and promote the benefits of electronic payments through conferences, interviews, surveys, and contests. A national project aimed at reducing cash payments was launched in 2015, in association with Maestro, Mastercard, Visa, UBI Banca, Bancomat Consortium, and Banco Popolare. As part of this, Bergamo was made a cashless city. Residents were offered discount coupons and vouchers on a daily and monthly basis for adopting electronic payment platforms. According to CartaSi, the city of Bergamo far exceeded the goal of the cashless city project by registering 611,623 cashless transactions in May 2015 against the set goal of 565,000 transactions.
