PUNE, MAHARASHTRA, INDIA, February 21, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- SUMMARY

WiseGuyReports published new report, titled "State Wise Regulatory and Policy Interface Dynamics & Implications Track"

Mapping Regulation, Identifying Key Regulatory Gaps and Estimating Opportunities for Value Chain Players in Power Sector of India

Deep thinking on various aspects of policy and regulatory interventions and their long-term implications will help in taking informed decisions and contribute in developing the sector. Hence, for enabling the stakeholders to better understand the existing policy offering of the states for solar, wind, small hydro, biomass and thermal power segment, enincon has attempted to come with a fact pack on regulatory regime. The report is framed to study the power sector policies of major states in the northern, southern, western & eastern regions and to determine their impact on state's overall power sector growth till FY 2022. The report also aims to find out the underlying investment opportunity & business potential in the states from conventional & RE power generation till FY 2022.

The power sector in India has witnessed a transformation with progressive policy-level & effective implementation of directives. These changes have offered significant opportunities and have generated faith enough of various industry stakeholders and market players to invest in India's power segment. Not only on the central front but at the state level too, the policy and regulatory environment have played a vital role in attracting investments. The renewable energy policies of the states are implemented on such similar grounds and have been very much responsible in shaping the RE market of the states. In this aspect, southern region states in India have been quite successful in creating an "Ease of doing business" environment through their regulatory regimes especially for wind and solar power segments.
