

New Prank Website Targets Politics and the Non-PC

Everything from prank greeting cards with snowflake confetti and Trump-style butterflyers to send to friends to very non-PC shirts, magnets, and stickers.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, February 26, 2018

/EINPresswire.com/ -- A new website has emerged following CPAC called <http://PoliticalPranks.com>. This site is in a soft launch with currently limited products, slated for a full launch on April 1st (April Fools Day). With a wide array of prank greeting cards that can have various confetti options and a Trump-style butterflyer, stickers to use on friends cars without causing damage and still getting a good laugh, stickers for personal use, and various t-shirts to thumb your nose at political correctness.

Currently the options are pranks are more geared toward use on a more liberal friend, but on April 1st there will be pranks for liberals to be able to send to their more conservative friends too.
