

Bitcoiin B2G Ambassador Steven Seagal on Aikido

The inspiration for Bitcoiin B2G came from a desire to build a self-sufficient cryptocurrency ecosystem, independent of central banks and national borders.

HONG KONG, CHINA, March 7, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Bitcoiin B2G, www.bitcoiin.com, currently in its pre-ICO sales phase, has launched a program of education, in the form of informational radio spots to be heard on Sirius XM Radio (www.siriusxm.com). As part of that program, Bitcoiin B2G global ambassador Steven Seagal was recently interviewed, expanding on principles he sees playing out in the world of cryptocurrency.

“Aikido, which I have studied since I was a very young man, teaches three basic principles,” said Seagal. “The first is to be fully present; the second, be adaptable; the third, make a contribution.” Seagal stresses that the martial arts, and particularly Aikido, are a useful source for thinking about leadership in business. Aikido, he says, “emphasizes the blending, rather than resisting, of an attacker’s energy. This is true of situations in everyday life also, especially in the artistic and business worlds.”

Seagal stresses that the martial arts, and particularly Aikido, are a useful source for thinking about leadership in business.

Fully present: When your attention connects with your experience, you are present to your life. Part of this is developing sensitivity to what is going on, both within ourselves and within others. This includes mindfulness about personal finances, since we all live both in the world and in ourselves.

Stay adaptable: Align with life as it unfolds. Awareness of reality makes it possible to develop a harmonious relationship with what is happening. Accept the situation. Don’t try to change it. This includes personal discipline, attention to detail, tolerance and patience. And most of all, Aikido teaches that curiosity brings rich rewards.

Make a contribution: Aikido is not passive. Harmony does not imply giving up. From a position of awareness and acceptance, a leader can mindfully influence a situation. Reaction is weakness; mindful influence shapes events. Teaching requires listening. Learning requires discipline.

These principles lead to constructive engagement with the realities of building a foundation for financial health. The financial world, which we all must live in and deal with, is full of obstacles, barriers, and institutions. Many of these institutions seek to regulate our lives. This has been true since international banking arose 400 years ago.

So why does a martial artist interest himself with a new cryptocurrency? Community, stewardship, curiosity, adaptability; extend your awareness beyond yourself. The inspiration for Bitcoin B2G came from a desire to build a self-sufficient cryptocurrency ecosystem, independent of central banks, national borders, and ties to the institutional world. Bitcoin B2G was designed to revive the original vision of cryptocurrency – anonymous, global, secure, transparent, reliable, secure.
