The local technology leader moves offices to downtown London, Ontario

LONDON, ONTARIO, CANADA, March 9, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Autodata Solutions, a leading technology provider of automotive merchandising and sales solutions today announced its official grand opening of its new headquarters located in downtown London, Ontario.

As one of the largest software technology companies in the London area, the space was custom designed to accommodate the Company's rapidly growing local workforce which currently stands at almost 400 and counting. Moving from its former location east of the downtown area, the new facility is over 50,000 square feet, spread over two floors in the Bell Building at 100 Dundas Street with plenty of available space for continued expansion. The space took four months to complete.

"As a growing technology company, we continually strive for innovation, so we put a lot of thought into creating an open and collaborative work environment to help foster creativity and collaboration throughout the organization," said Chris Wedermann, CIO of Autodata Solutions.

"Our goal was to create a first-class facility that would help retain and attract the best talent in the industry, and I believe we achieved that," added Mary Holbrook, Sr. Director of HR of Autodata. "We're thrilled to have our employees situated under one roof and to be part of the vibrant downtown community."

The new space was designed to make the most of the expansive windows with an open floor plan and lots of open areas to encourage more informal engagement. Other features include common areas designed to capture natural light and employee workstations that can be easily converted to standing desks—a growing trend in the workplace.
