The global healthcare BPO market is primarily driven by the implementation of the PPACA. It is the US federal statute launched by President Barak Obama in 2010. These acts were launched with the sole purpose of reducing the cost of healthcare. Under the PPACA, hospitals, research centers, clinics and physicians are enforced to change their practices clinically, financially and technologically to provide better healthcare services at lower prices. This act is also formulated to lower the uninsured rate and to enhance the quality and affordability of health insurance by expanding insurance coverage and minimizing the cost of healthcare. Under these act, subsidies are provided to the households whose incomes come between the 100% and 400% of the federal poverty levels. PPACA increases the pressure on the healthcare organization to reduce the overall cost of the healthcare and to provide better services, which forces healthcare organization to outsource the services.

On the basis of geography, the market is divided into North America, Asia Pacific, Europe and Rest of the world. North America is estimated to account for major share in the market owing to highest healthcare expenditure, increasing pressure to reduce the healthcare cost and implementation of PPACA and ICD-10 Codes. The growing healthcare insurance fraud in this region is further boosting the demand for healthcare outsourcing services such as claim management. In 2015, more than 470 healthcare fraudsters were observed. In 2017, the U.S. Department of Justice obtained more than $2.4 billion in healthcare settlements involving fraud and false claim against the government. Asia Pacific is estimated to be the fastest growing region in the market due to improving healthcare infrastructure, availability of skilled professionals for low cost in the region and presence of major players such as TCS, Infosys and Genpact.
