announced today that one of its Vein Care Specialists, Angela Sheffield, MMSc, PA-C, RPhS was awarded the Registered Phlebology Sonographer (RPhS) Credential by Cardiovascular Credentialing International (CCI). The credential was developed by CCI with the support of the American College of Phlebology to recognize achievement and set standards for physicians and others who perform ultrasound in the practice of Phlebology, also known as Venous and Lymphatic Medicine. Applicants for the credential must meet certain standards for training and experience and must pass an examination.

According to CCI, an RPhS diagnoses and treats patients by performing diagnostic tests and/or performing or assisting in non_surgical, open surgical, and minimally invasive treatments utilizing in depth knowledge of venous diseases, anatomy, and pathophysiology to provide optimal patient outcomes and extend or enhance the quality of patient’s lives.

Mrs. Sheffield is a Tampa Bay area native who graduated from the University of South Florida, summa cum laude, with a Bachelor of Health Science degree where she was a member of the Arts & Sciences Honors Society and won the University of South Florida Health Sciences Outstanding Student Award (Valedictorian). Angela earned a Master’s Degree in Physician Assistant studies from Nova Southeastern University, with Highest Honors.

“At Vein911® Vein Treatment Centers, our team is dedicated to providing world class results and a world class patient experience”, said Chris Pittman, M.D., Medical Director and CEO of Vein911® Vein Treatment Centers. “Every Vein911® Vein Care Specialist is best in class, possess outstanding credentials, and pursue educational goals to increase their knowledge, advance their career, and improve the lives of our patients suffering from venous and lymphatic disorders.”
