

New Wine Scotch and Cognac ICO now Available

Wines & Spirits Ltd have formed a new ICO that is asset backed by fine wines, scotch and cognac

LONDON, ENGLAND, March 26, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Wines and Spirits LTD are presenting to investors is a way to participate in cryptocurrenices with the opportunity to see increased value and to be able to utilize the crypto currency for the purchase of the asset behind the crypto currency. We are issuing an Initial Coin Offering (ICO) and it is the intent of the company to purchase valuable wines, cognacs, and scotch that will be stored in a company owned facility.

As the value of these holdings increase over time, the company will sell some of these holdings and then distribute the capital gains to holders of the crypto currency tokens. At the same time holders of the tokens will be able to purchase any of the wines, scotch and cognacs that the Company stores at a ten percent discount (10 %) to the market.

The main focus will be wines, where an investment in fine wine has delivered average returns of 12.9% per annum, since 1988.

The London FTSE 100 was launched on January 3rd 1984 with a base level of 1,000. At the same time, the most recently released vintage of first growth Bordeaux estate Chateau Lafite Rothschild was the 1982. At the time the FTSE 100 index was launched you could purchase a case of 12 bottles of this wine for £275.

If an investor had £5000 to invest in either Lafite Rothschild 1982 or £5000 in the FTSE 100, which would have done better? As of today the 18 cases of Lafite Rothschild 1982 would be worth £777,000 whilst the investment in the FTSE 100 would be worth £37,000.

While rare whiskey returned almost 28% in the past year – 370% since 2010 – according to the RW Apex 1000, an index of the world's 1000 most valuable single malts that is run by independent database Rare Whiskey 101.
