About Soupman

The Original Soupman’s roots began at the famous 55th St. and 8th Ave. store which inspired the famous “Seinfeld” episode that made Soupman a cultural icon. The soups were praised by the New York Times who called it “Art, not Soup” and the soups were rated #1 by Zagat as it set the standard for excellence. Today, the Original Soupman has built on that innovation and sells their soups across America in Tetra Pak cartons in the soup aisle at grocery stores and online. They have franchised restaurants and fresh soup available through their foodservice operations. Visit www.originalsoupman.com, “Like” us on Facebook and follow us on Instagram.
