

Scottish EdTech Publishing Company is Warmly Received in India

Creative writing and publishing tool, MageQuill, is now poised for its global expansion, having has been warmly welcomed by users in India.

DORNIE, SCOTTISH HIGHLANDS, UNITED KINGDOM, April 2, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Mossytop Dreamharvest, a Highland based publisher and Edtech company, made its debut into India at the Smart India Hackthon Grand Finale at the JSS Academy of Technical Education, NOIDA. Swara Shukla, a creative writing graduate from Glasgow university, represented the company when she presented the Indian Minister of Human Resource Development, the Honourable Shri Prakash Javadekar, with a token of Scottish creativity and innovation. Dr. Mahesh Sharma, Minister of State for Culture and Tourism, as well as Prof Dileep N. Malkhede, Advisor to the All Indian Council for Technical Education, also received a memento commemorating the event.

Since March, MageQuill, Mossytop's trademark creative writing tool, is now available to all Highland schools, in both the public and private sectors, and is as of April, also being rolled out in India. MageQuill allows students and writers under the age of 26 to unleash their creativity to write about today's issues, their concerns, their thoughts and ideas, without boundaries or borders within a
