So how could a mesothelioma compensation claim involving a US Navy Veteran stationed on submarine, or at a shipyard be potentially more valuable?

According to the Georgia Mesothelioma Victims Center "A sailor stationed on a nuclear submarine could have literally been exposed to asbestos anytime the sub underwent repairs while underway. It is impossible to go on deck to avoid exposure to asbestos if you are underway on a submarine. Most US Navy Veterans we talk with who have mesothelioma also spent time on their ship or boat when it was berthed or in dry dock at a shipyard as we would like to discuss anytime at 800-714-0303."
