

Prestige Decanters Writes Comical Blog about Kentucky

Handcrafted Decanter Company exploits the top sites to see in Kentucky with a Twist

LOUISVILLE, KY, UNITED STATES, April 5, 2018 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Prestige Decanters, a liquor decanter company specializing in handcrafted glass and wood decanters for home bars, crafted a blog post sure to make you laugh, titled "23 Reasons to Stay Away from Kentucky." The blog plays off of rumors about why Kentucky isn't fun and pairs them with photos to show why those rumors are indeed false.

Of the company's most recent blog post, Louisville's Jack-O-Lantern Spectacular exists as just one of the twenty-three attractions mentioned. Here's their witty blip about this particular event: "Picture this. Hundreds upon hundreds of jack-o-lanterns staring at you as you walk past them in a dark forest. Who knew staring at edible artwork would be so popular. I mean, you can't even eat them!"

Natalie Bickel, social media coordinator for Prestige Decanters, also writes about Kentucky's free monthly trolley hop. "Why does Louisville offer so many free things? I mean some people want to pay for stuff. But no, instead Kentucky offers a free trolley hop the first Friday of every month where you can taste wine and look at artwork. Come on!" The blog goes on and on like this about several other local attractions such as the Kentucky Derby, Thunder over Louisville, Slugger Museum, Forecastle, Mega Cavern, and more. The subtitles above each photo truly tell the story of how far rumors have gone when it comes to this "hillbilly" state.
